

Linux Users' Group of Davis presents Free Software for Students

Taking control of your academic life

As a student, the software you use every day is a vital part of your academic life. You need good software to browse the web, do research, take notes, write papers, code, analyze statistics, create presentations, share data, and more. Doesn't it make sense to choose the best tools for your own success?

There is a world of Free and Open Source Software out there that is just as powerful and easy to use as many proprietary programs that cost hundreds of dollars, and it is available completely for FREE.

Whether you use Windows, Linux, or Apple products, the world of Open Source gives you the freedom to choose, use and control your own computer, your own software, and your own personal data.

The Linux Users' Group of Davis is here to support you in choosing and using the right Free and Open-Source software for your needs. To find out more, please come to our next meeting at 7pm on the 15th of October at Explorit Science Center in Davis (3141 5th Street). Our meetings are always open to the public and membership is always free!
